Taliban Country: PBS (Frontline) Jan 2020.	Nearly 20 years after the U.S. drove the Taliban from power in Afghanistan, the group claims it holds more territory than any time since the war began in 2001. As President Trump says he wants to end the war, FRONTLINE reporter Najibullah Quraishi goes on a dangerous journey inside both Taliban- and ISIS-held territory and exposes the harsh reality that not only is the Taliban once again wielding power, but the threat from ISIS looms large.
36 Hours with The Taliban: Feb 2019 CNN.	CNN goes exclusively behind Taliban lines as the US prepares to pull its troops after 17 years of war in Afghanistan. After months of negotiations, the Taliban's leadership granted extremely rare access and protection in an area under its control to Afghan filmmaker Najibullah Quraishi and a female CNN team.

May 2017 ISIL: Target Russia. Al Jazeera English	Thousands of ISIL fighters are training in the mountains of Afghanistan, plotting an attack on the Kremlin. But following President Vladimir Putin's policy of military involvement in Syria, Russia may have taken its place as ISIL's main target.
Afghanistan: Bullets And Burqas. May 2017 Al Jazeera	Najibullah Quraishi follows a group of Afghan women who have signed up to fight the Taliban and ISIS. Last month's massive bombings in the capital, Kabul, have underscored the difficulties the Afghanistan government has been having recently in containing a resurgent Taliban, backed by a growing Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant ISIS presence. The activities of the latter, with whom the Taliban currently seem to have a self-serving truce, are particularly worrisome because as ISIL suffers military reverses in Syria and Iraq it is looking to establish safer havens elsewhere and Afghanistan seems to fit the bill.
ISIL And The Taliban; Aljazeera- Oct 2015- ISIS In Afghanistan; Frontline PBS Nov2015	ISIS is on the rise in Afghanistan -- and they say they're getting young kids to join the jihad. In a special report, FRONTLINE correspondent Najibullah Quraishi reveals on film the degree to which ISIS is gaining a foothold in the country, and how they're focusing their efforts on training a new generation of jihadists.
	Living Beneath the Drones follows

Living Beneath The Drones: For Al Jazeera June 2015	journalist Quraishi, who has reported on the war in Afghanistan since 2001, as he uncovers his country's dire mental health situation and the impact and trauma caused by conflict and the newest weapon of war - drones, which constantly fly overhead. Twenty-eight-year-old Sadiqullah worked as a cook in a hotel in Afghanistan's Pech District when US drones targeting Taliban fighters hit the area."Lots of people who were in the restaurant were all killed in front of his eyes," explains veteran Afghan journalist and filmmaker Najibullah Quraishi.

Dec 2014-The Taliban Girls: For Al Jazeera English.	An insight into a girls' school in Afghanistan which imposes an even stricter interpretation of Islam than the Taliban. Kunduz in northern Afghanistan is the country's fifth largest city and home to more than 300,000 people. It's fine to go to madrasa to learn about sharia, the Quran and Islam. But beyond that, they keep girls in total darkness like the blind. They keep them illiterate.
Oct-Dec 2014-Afghanistan: The Lion's Last Roar? For BBC2.	This two part series tells the story of the conflict in Afghanistan and asks what has been achieved and whether the British have the will to fight in distant lands again

July 2014-Growing Up Behind Bars	Hundreds of young children in Afghanistan are being forced to share a jail cell with their mothers; women who in many cases are protesting their innocence or have been convicted of so-called moral crimes. Many of those children are facing years behind bars, cut off from the outside world yet themselves completely innocent of any offence.

March 2014- On The Other Side Of War; For Channel 4 and NRK (Norwegian Television)	It is clearly not the reality the Afghan government wants publicised. Still less the west, which bankrolls Afghanistan's army and armed police. But it is the reality of America's longest foreign war that large areas of the countryside are no-go for the Afghan National Army and National Police.
